APPEAL EXPECTED IN REDISTRICTING SUIT

Attorneys Expected to Ask Supreme Court Decision as Soon as Judgment of Judge Welch is Recorded

Opponents to the proposed redistricting of the county supervisorial district according to the plan now before the board of supervisors, have only one alternative, that of an appeal to the state supreme court. It was reported this week, following the reading of the decision of Judge J. R. Welch of Santa Clara county, before whom the case was heard, that J. E. McCurdy, attorney for Dante Dianda and Horace Nelson, coastside residents, would file such an appeal. No action will be taken in the matter, however, until the judgment of the court is recorded.

Judge Welch's decision as rendered on Tuesday makes it mandatory upon the part of the board of supervisors either to pass the proposed ordinance redistricting the county according to population, or to put the matter before the people of the county at an election. The action brought by Dianda and Nelson was for a writ of injunction enjoining the board from taking such action.

Attorneys for George R. Williams, of Burlingame, intervenor for the proponents of redistricting, stated this week that they expect an appeal from the judgment to Judge Welch, and that they were confident that in case of such an appeal, that the judgment of the court would be upheld in the higher court. Those seeking a redistricting of the county are represented by Attorney John Davis of Burlingame, and by Kirkbride, Wilson & Brooks of San Mateo.

The proposed division of the county will be as follows:

In the first township the present precinct of San Pedro, which is the northernmost precinct on the coastside, would go to the fifth, or coastside district. The first district would lose Lomita Park, Millbrae and the north half of Burlingame. These, together with the south half of Burlingame, will constitute the second and largest district from the standpoint of population.

The third district will include Hillsborough, San Mateo and Beresford, which at present, together with part of Burlingame, are in the second district, but will give Belmont and San Carlos, at present in the second township, to the fourth, or Redwood district. The fourth township will include these two and all of Redwood City.

The fifth township will extend from San Pedro on the north end of the coastside to the extreme south end of the coastside, including the territory of San Pedro, Salada Beach, Half Moon Bay, La Honda, Purissima, San Gregorio, Rockaway, Granada, Montara, Moss Beach, Princeton and Pescadero, and also will include much of that territory that is now Redwood City district, including Ravenswood, Atherton, Menlo Park, Fair Oaks, North Palo Alto, Woodside and Portola.

The present division of the county was adopted in 1895, but due to the fact that the eastern side of the county has increased in population much faster than the western side, the present representation on the board of supervisors is all out of proportion to the number of electors. The proposed ordinance is designed to remedy this condition. Under the proposed division the number of voters in each district would be nearly 6000 as possible.

LOCAL RED CROSS BUSY ON BAGS

Redwood City Chapter, American Red Cross, has started work on 72 gift bags, which will be sent to American soldiers in Foreign service for Christmas, particularly the men in China, Japan, Alaska, Nicaragua, Haiti and the Philippine Islands. A sample of the bag, together with the articles that are contained in the kit, is on display in the office of the Standard.

Mrs. Harry Potts, chairman of the production committee of the local Red Cross chapter, received the following letter last week from Mrs. Mabel E. Axline, director of Red Cross service at the U. S. Veterans' hospital in Walla Walla, Washington, thanking the chapter for 13 bed jackets sent the patients.

Mrs. H. Potts,
Production Chairman,
Redwood City Chapter,
American Red Cross,
Redwood City, California.
Dear Mrs. Potts:

We have just received thirteen bedjackets made by your chapter. I do wish you could see the comfort and pleasure the bedjackets give the patients. There is nothing we give them that pleases them more. The tubercular men are in the hospital so long, some of them for years, and these nice warm bedjackets are just wonderful for them.

Will you please express the sincere thanks of the patients to the Volunteer Service Committee.

Yours most sincerely,
RED CROSS SERVICE

State-Counties Join to Battle Menace of Fire

$7620 Spent in Coutny For Figthing Fire Last Year

SACRAMENTO, May 29—The vision of roaring forest fires rushing through virgin forests of California, is again rising before the eyes of California officials as arid summer months approach.

Indications are for a dry year, with its attendant danger of fires caused by carelessness of man or by electrical storms.

Joining with the state in the coming summer campaign against fire is San Mateo county, which last year spent $7.620 in forest and fire protection.

"A growing spirit of cooperation is manifesting itself throughout California in this eternal problem of fighting fire," declared State Forester M. B. Pratt.

"Twenty-seven counties have signed agreements with the state whereby they pool money and men with the state to combat the flames. We will face the approaching summer better prepared than ever before to hold down the fire scourge.

"Much of our trouble heretofore has been a lack of cooperation between various units which should join forces to protect themselves. I have personally visited each of the counties already signed and a fine spirit exists in every one of them. Before June 15 we hope to have many more counties signed up on a county-state agreement."

A determined effort to prevent serious experiences of 1929 is being made by the county and state organizations, according to Pratt. Unprecedented dry weather kept the fire menace acute until late in December.

Starting on March 1, the University of California, in conjunction with the state Division of Forestry, started giving fire prevention demonstrations in counties. Fifty demonstrations were held in 16 counties up to May 1. A total attendance of over 11,000 persons visited the meetings and the work is still continuing.

"It's an old story when we start giving warnings on how to prevent fires," said Pratt, "but one that must be repeated each year. Be sure your cigarettes, cigars and matches are out before throwing them away. Don't start fires near inflamable wood or when high winds are blowing. Bury the embers when you desert your fires.

"If California would observe these rules we would not have losses to our timber running into a million dollars or more each year.'.'

The sponsors were D. E. O'Keefe and Sam D. Merk. Similar petitions will be filed in every county of the state with two sponsors.

Interest Shown In Book Circulation

In order to meet the steadily increasing reading activity at the local Public Library, there are constantly being added a wide variety of new books to suit the varied interests and needs of the community. They are largely the more prominent books of the day.

Some idea of the new activity may be gained through the circulation figures of the first four months of the present year. During January, February, March and April of 1930 there have been 22,398 books circulated to literary patrons, while during the same period one year ago the circulation was 12,247 volumes. This is a gain of 10,152 volumes in this short period. A year ago the average monthly book circulation was 3062 volumes, while at present it is 5600. The expansion continues steadily, and the effort is being made to provide a library service commensurate with the growth and progress of the city.

The Weekly Story Hour for children has continued through the season. New books for boys and girls are added regularly and they circulate actively.

Special Assessment Evils to be Curbed

SACRAMENTO, May 29—Evils of special assessments in California cities have attracted the attention of Everett W. Mattoon of Los Angeles, the man who sponsored the act through the 1929 legislture under which all such levies are made.

A total general property tax of $181,056 was paid in Redwood City in 1929, with $115,321 special assessment taxes levied in addition, a recent survey showed.

"Special improvement acts are absolutely necessary to achieve real estate and industrial growth," Mattoon declared, "but the abuse which has been made of these proceedings in some localities must convince us that safeguards should be placed upon their use so that private property and its free use and sale be not strangled..."

Mattoon has becked the California Real Estate Association and other state organizations to combat evils which have crept into administration of the 1925 Improvement Act.

"From investigations I have made I am convinced that in some localities local legislative bodies have been either victimized or mislead by promoters having personal aggrandizement only in mind, Mattoon continued. "This has developed to such on extent that property in many districts is absolutely unable to carry the load, with the result that many people are forced to lose their holdings because of this overburdening."

In some California cities, Mattoon pointed out, special assessment taxes are four and five times the total of the general property tax.

Two major correctives are proposed by Mattoon to guard against folly of lavish, extravagant and ill-advised special assessments:

1.—Some limitation upon the power to levy special assessments, which will prevent present overburdening of private property and restrict use of assessments to necessary cases.

2. A commission of some official body should be required to carefully investigate, analize and report upon every proposed proceeding before the initial step is taken, so that definite facts and figures are available upon which to determine whether or not the proposed project is justified by public necessity and its cost commensurate with ability of the property in the district to pay thereafter.

"The evils which confront us today spring from the abuse, not from the intelligent and sensible use of special assessment proceedings, and there is no reason why a sane, sensible campaign of correction cannot cure these evils and render their repetition impossible," Mattoon said.

County Recorder To Seek Election

County Recorder T. C. Rice this week announced that he will again seek election to that office. He has not yet filed his papers of nomination, and so far is unopposed.

Twelve years ago Rice was elected as recorder of this county, and has during his time of office proved himself to be one of the ablest of our county officers. Each year the grand jury has commended the county recorder upon the efficiency with which his office has been conducted.

Fire Damages Old Building On Main Street

Redwood City House Scene of Blaze Yesterday

Fire, believed to have originated around a defective flue in a rear chimney, yesterday damaged the upper portion of the Hotel de Redwood, formerly the Redwood City House. The fire had gained considerable headway among the rafters and shingles of the old frame building before it was noticed.

When the firemen arrived they found the fire raging beneath the roof, and found it necessary to cut away a large portion of the roof to combat the flames. The fire was finally subdued, after about a half hour's fighting by the firemen, using two of the city's pumping engines and five lines of hose.

Aside from the damage to the roof and some from the water used, there was little damage to the hotel. The hotel is the property of Mrs. C. C. Graves and is conducted by Tony Bertolucci.

Buelna Death Breaks Link With Days Gone

By D. E. O'KEEFE

In the death of John B. Buelna at Menlo Park last Saturday evening a link connecting the present with the past has snapped. The chain is broken. The man who first saw the light of day under the Mexican flag in an adobe house on the banks of the San Francisquito Creek located on his father's estate is gone. On December 10, 1844, those troublesome times when the United States was bending every effort to secure possession of California to get control of the Pacific Coast, Buelna was born. Just as the boy began to walk Commodore Sloat raised the Stars and Stripes over the old custom house at Monterey on July 7, 1846. As he grew older he trod the original path over which the sainted Junipero Serra and the other padres passed on their weary way to the missions located on the long winding trail from San Diego to Mission Dolores in San Francisco. As a youth Buelna wandered through the peninsula jungle seeking wild game. He traveled to Mission Santa Clara to attend mass. This was shortly after the securalizing of the mission. Thus he saw it in its prestine glory and witnessed its decay. As a bare-footed boy romping around his humble home he was told of the gold rush in '49 by his parents. He remembered the story well.

In his teens Buelna gathered with the Spanish families at the country side to enjoy the fiestas lasting for several days. This was the pastoral period of California, the dolce far niente, sweet idleness days when care was thrown to the winds and all were happy and contented.

Those were the days that Buelna knew best, loved most and longed to live over again. The cares, sorrows and responsibilities that came with the years overwhelmed him. He lived in history-making time. He was a part of it. He saw, when the Gringo came, the jungle cleared, cities and towns grow up. Buelna witnessed the building of the big gates at Menlo Park in 1854. This was the beginning of the town. He helped to place the tiling on the roofs of the Stanford buildings. He knew this work well for he often tiled adobe roofs for the early settlers.

Antone Buelna, father of the deceased, was a soldier. For his achievements in the Mexican army he was given the San Francisquito grant, comprising all the land stretching from the bay to the hills in which large domain are the busy cities of Palo Alto, Mayfield, Mountain View and Sunyvale. The vast Stanford University tract is a part of the possession. The little adobe house was erected in 1812 by the elder Buelna. The rafters were brought on the backs of Indians from the Greer ranch at Portola. Antone Buelna died when the son was very young and the widow married and lost her vast possession in litigation. The deceased was raised by the Greer family and at an early age had to make his own way in the world. Had he been able to retain only one lot on University avenue in Palo Alto, which property is now selling at $2000 a front foot, he could have lived in affluence.

His passing only recalls the early times of which he was a part and brings back memories of those days which we all like to hear about from the lips of those who lived in that long ago period.

Buelna is survived by his widow and two children, a son and daughter and a step-son.

BANDITS CAPTURED AFTER GROCERY STORE HOLDUP

Redwood City Police Arrest Two Men Who Are Charged With Robbery of Middlefield Grocery

Two men who are alleged to have held up the Middlefield Grocery on the Middlefield road near the southern city limits of Redwood City, were caught at 10:15 Tuesday night by Chief of Police Collins with Officer Henry Mengels of the Redwood City department and Officer Hubbard of the Atherton police.

The two men entered the Middlefield Grocery and robbed the proprietor of $30 in cash. The sheriff's office was notified and also peninsula police departments. A short time later the attendant at an oil station on the Middlefield road reported that two men were acting in a suspicious manner near the station, and he feared that they contemplated a holdup of the station.

The police immediately went to the station, where they found the two men answering a description given by the man who had been held up in the grocery store. When the officers attempted to take the pair, one of them is reported to have attempted to draw a gun from under his coat.

At the jail one of the men gave his name as R. C. Webb, 48, an iron worker; the other as R. Hodge, 37, an asbestos worker. An effort is now being made to identify them by means of finger prints, and perhaps to link them with other crimes which have been committed in this section.

Burglar Nabbed By Man Whom He Had Burglarized

A good memory for faces on the part of Bill Lange, former nationallyn known baseball player, now a resident of Milbrae, resulted Tuesday in the arrest of Ed Saunders, 19, on a charge of burglary.

Sunday night when Lange and his wife returned to their Millbrae home, they saw a youth just leaving the place. On entering their home they found that the house had been entered and a ring and other articles taken.

Tuesday evening while driving south along the highway near Belmont, Lange saw the same youth begging a ride beside the highway. He stopped and asked him to ride. Lange drove to Redwod City and parked his car in front of the telephone office next to the jail. A call to the jail resulted in Saunders' arrest. He later confessed to the burglary, stating that he was out of work and hungry, and that he had gone to the house to ask for something to eat, but finding no one at home, had gone in and taken the jewelry to buy food.

LOCAL EAGLES WIN FELTON 2 TO 1

Harry Bourquin took his Redwood City Eagles to Felton last Sunday for the annual baseball game with the Felton "Woodpeckers." The locals gave Elsworth Hatley faultless support and with the young pitcher in splendid form, the Redwood team came out on the long end of a 2 to 1 score. Hatley allowed but six scattered hits.

The Eagles scored their first run in the fourth inning, when "Brick" Allain got a two bagger with Hatley on second. The winning tally was scored in the eighth frame when Bechet crossed the pan on Gene Gordan's single.

A return game is being planned at Felton on July 20.

Supervised by Clarence Morrill, chief of the bureau, this "clearing house" gathers reports on felony violations from all counties, and each month brings in a new grist of reports reflecting the crime tendencies of youth and adult.

A suit in eminent domain to determine the ownership of the Santa Cruz beach front was on file in Superior court of Santa Cruz County. The action is expected to settle a 25 year controversy between the city of Santa Cruz and the Santa Cruz Seaside Company. The company and thirty-two others were named defendants. The complaint sets forth that all of the defendants claim some interest in the beach front but that under a resolution passed by the city council last April the city will "take all steps necessary to recover and hold these lands for public use."

California has grown more in the last decade than any other state of the Union, Washington census officials declared. Estimates indicated that the state's population in 1930 is 5,524,887, an increase of 58.72 per cent since 1920 when the census showed 3,480,902. The estimates were based on returns from eighteen cities in northern California and thirty-four in southern California, which showed an icrease of 817,294. California has five cities with 100,000 or more population. They are Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, Oakland and Long Beach.

POULTRY FACTS

SELL POULTRY BY CANNING PROCESS

Profitable Way to Dispose of Fowls if Prices Low.

During culling seasons when poultry is selling at a low price, poultry may be disposed of profitably by canning, according to the New York state college of home economics at Cornell university.

The quality of canned poultry depends on the condition of the fresh meat and the method of canning. As soon as the animal heat has disappeared, usually six to eight hours after killing, the fowl is ready for the canner, to turn it into a wholesome product properly sterilized. Because the flesh has a compact texture, which the heat penetrates slowly, a high temperature is necessary, and most authorities agree that meat should be canned only under pressure. The length of time for processing is the same whether the chicken is roasted, fried, or fricasseed before putting it in jars or whether it is packed uncooked. Many prefer to can the chicken raw to avoid the warmed-over flavor of canned cooked chicken.

When chicken is packed in the jars it may be left on the bone, or the meat alone may be used, cut in pieces to fit. Pack the jar as tightly as possible after it has been thoroughly cleaned and sterilized. Wide-mouth jars are easiest for packing. Pieces containing a great deal of gelatin, as the back and neck, are placed in the center of the jar and the other pieces around them. Holding the jar in a slanting position and using a small wooden spoon or spatula makes it easier to insert the pieces. By placing the skin next to the outside of the jar a tighter pack is obtained because the skin sticks to the hot jar. The more tender pieces may be placed on top, so they will not break when being removed. No water is used in canning; if the poultry is carefully packed there is no room for water and one teaspoonful of salt is used to each quart of packed chicken.

Tin cans as well as glass jars may be used successfully in canning poultry and present-day tin cans are quite safe to use. The method of packing is the same. All cold air should be exhausted before sealing the can by standing the filled cans in a pan of boiling water, which comes to within one inch of the top of the can, for from ten to fifteen minutes. If the air is not driven out, the can is apt to buldge.

Turkey Eggs Should Be Handled Very Carefully

Turkey eggs should be kept in a uniform temperature, not above 60 degrees, though successful breeders bring them into a warm room for revitalizing if held for hatching in cold weather. The longer a fertile turkey egg is held, the poorer its chance, after the first few days, of hatching. The date when it is due to hatch should be marked on the egg when set. If date of gathering is also marked, the breeder will be interested in noting the effects of difference in age on vitality. It would take more eggs than the average breeder sets, however, to prove anything absolutely—too many reasons enter into the hatchability of eggs and the livability of poults to say this is or is not true after one or two experiments.

Laying Mash for Ducks While on Grass Plot

A good laying mash for ducks would be equal parts by weight of yellow corn meal, standard wheat middlings, wheat bran, ground oats to which you should add by weight 15 per cent of meat and bone meal, 2 per cent powdered charcoal, one-half of 1 per cent fine table salt and 1 per cent of fine sharp sand. This should be fed twice a day and they might have a little cracked corn once a day. This is on the assumption that the ducks are run on a grass plot and getting all the green food they want.

Scaly Leg Remedy

Crude petroleum is considered the best treatment for scaly leg. A mixture of equal parts of lard and kerosene is a good treatment, making use of readily available products. The hens are treated by putting the legs in a can containing the treating material and holding them there for upwards of a minute. Care should be used in order to get as little as possible of the material above the feather edge. It will blister the skin. This will irritate the fowl.

Hatch in Incubator

The hatching of duck and goose eggs can be successfully carried out with the incubator if the tray is made high enough to accommodate goose eggs. Also there is another point which must be carefully watched. These eggs require much more moisture than hen eggs do. Ducks require 28 days, geese 28 to 29 days and turkeys 27 to 29 days for incubation. The temperatures are practically the same as those required for hatching ordinary hen eggs.

Grass for Goslings

Ordinarily goslings will not and should not be hatched before the grass and clovers will be of sufficient size to provide them with good grazing. In growing goslings it must be remembered that grass is the principal constituent of the ration and that grain should be fed only as an accessory feed. The grain should not be fed before the second day and then in the form of a crumbly moist mash. It should be fed in very small amounts and three or four times per day.

THEIR ELOPEMENT PROVED A FAILURE

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

MARY ELLEN was running away with her father's best friend. She felt warm and excited in her new blue suit and she gazed demurely straight ahead at the road that was unwinding before them.

"Happy, Mary Ellen?" her companion queried, smiling fatuously at her. He was florid and somewhat stocky and his eyes held a too bright gleam.

"Yes, Mr. West," Mary Ellen agreed respectfully.

"But you promised not to call me—Mr. West, little Honeybunch," he chided her.

"Oh! yes," Mary Ellen sighed. "But you see I've called you that all my life. It—it doesn't seem exactly respectful to call you—John."

Mr. West laughed loudly.

"You'll get over all that when you're my wife and mistress of a farm—you'll be mistress of two farms when your old man cashes in."

Mary Ellen was silent, a vague hurt creeping beneath her ribs. She didn't exactly like Mr. West to talk about her father like that.

She wondered if she would like being married. It had been rather fun lately to have Mr. West bring her boxes of candy and smile at her as if she were chocolate cake or peach ice cream. It would be fun, too, to play with his children. Jack was just a year older than herself. It had been lonely at her home with her folks so strict and not letting boys come to see her. Father had laughed and mother had smiled at Mr. West's boxes of candy. She wondered what they would say when they knew she was really married.

"Only ten miles farther to this here town where we're going to get hitched up," Mr. West orated, sending his flivver forward with a little burst of speed.

Mary Ellen jumped. She had been looking at the pretty houses they were passing. She was sorry the ride was almost over.

Mr. West somehow did not appear as much a man of the world in the city as he had up on the farm. He didn't know in which direction the city hall was, and when he inquired of a traffic cop he winked at him and tried to be funny.

At the city hall an old-maidish looking woman surveyed them keenly and asked a lot of senseless questions.

"How old are you?" she queried of Mary Ellen.

"Eighteen, come last June," Mary Ellen replied promptly.

The woman yanked the sheet out of her typewriter with a jerk.

"I can't issue you a license—you're too young. Have to be twenty-one."

Mary Ellen thought that the woman's eyes rested upon her rather pityingly. It wasn't as if she were sorry about her not getting married, but as if she were sorry about something else.

A man whispered something to Mr. West as they went out.

"Go over the border. The age over there's eighteen."

Mary Ellen sighed. She was getting tired, and she had thought that what the woman said would settle the matter and she wouldn't have to get married.

After all marriage might not be as pleasant as people hinted by laughs and winks.

They scuttled along over bumpy roads, and after asking the way several times located an ivy-covered court house.

Another couple were there ahead of them. The girl was just a little older than Mary Ellen, but the boy was very different from Mr. West. He was tall and straight and sun-tanned, and when his blue eyes rested on the girl they lighted up, like church windows.

Mary Ellen suddenly noticed how very red Mr. West's cheeks were and how his eyes were imbedded in little puffs of fat. His coat sagged where the boy's shoulders held his nice and straight.

Mary Ellen felt slightly sick when Mr. West marched up to the clerk and button-holed him with a smirking grin.

"This little lady and I want to get a marriage license."

Mary Ellen's hands were like ice. She responded "eighteen" very faintly, and when the clerk accepted her age without comment her heart sank to her toes. She had begun to hope that maybe this clerk would object to her age, too.

"How long have you been a resident?" the clerk asked a second time.

Mary Ellen stared dumbly.

"He means how long you've lived here," Mr. West explained, jocosely. "We just come, suh."

"Sorry—have to be a resident of the country for six months," the clerk regretted with a sympathetic smile.

Mary Ellen's knees were knocking together when she left the courthouse and Mr. West's ardor was slightly dampened.

"What—what are we going to tell your folks if we go back not married?" Mr. West questioned her weakly.

For the first time Mary Ellen rose to the occasion. Not for nothing had she read her initial best seller a month ago.

"Tell them we came to dinner in town and had tire trouble," she improvised. "And—and you might as well get me the dinner, for I'm hungry."

She was all of a sudden gloriously happy that she was not getting married and could still look for a hero like the blond bridegroom at the court house.

Mr. West, reflected Mary Ellen tired and got peaked-looking easily. Probably he'd better look for a heftier woman to run his farm and handle his young 'uns.

First to Use Coal Oil

The first to introduce the use of coal oil, or "kerosene," in the United States and Canada was Dr. Abraham Gesner, a distinguished Canadian geologist. Doctor Gesner, after long experimentation, discovered how to produce oil that could be used in lamps for illuminating purposes, from bituminous shale and cannel coal. Though he gave the name "kerosene" to his discovery it was popularly called coal oil.

Following the discovery of petroleum in Pennsylvania in 1859, and later in many other sections of North America, kerosene became the principal product of the distillation of the crude oil. Like most inventors, Doctor Gesner reaped little financial benefit from his discovery, which was destined to be the foundation of scores of immense fortunes.

Tobacco in History

The tobacco plant was taken to Europe in 1558 by Francisco Fernandes, who had been sent by Philip the Second of Spain to investigate the products of Mexico. Jean Nicot, the French ambassador to Portugal, sent seeds of the plant to the queen. The services rendered by Nicot in spreading a knowledge of the herb have been commemorated in the scientific name of the genus Nicotiana. While the plant came to Europe through Spain, its use for smoking purposes spread to the continent from England. Ralph Lane, first governor of Virginia, and Sir Walter Raleigh, who first used it as smoking tobacco, introducing it into England.

Might Be Trained to Return

A new dollar bill was recently put into circulation to find out how much work a dollar does. Attached to the bill was a note asking each successive holder to write down the transaction for which he used the money. In 14 days the dollar changed hands 26 times as follows: Five times each for salary, tobacco and cigarettes; three times for candy, two times for men's furnishings and shaves, and one each for automobile accessories, bacon garters and tooth paste.—Wall Street Journal.

Made Shad Roe Popular

Sixty years ago, customers of New York restaurants considered shad a delicacy but there was little demand for the roe. This state of affairs was changed, however, when a chef went to market one day, saw the roes tossed aside, bought some and prepared them with green peas and a mealy potato as a special dish, which sold for 25 cents. The dish took the fancy of the customers and became a Friday feature.—Detroit News.

Beautiful Street

Altadena, Calif., has a mile-long avenue of deodars. These are Himalayan cedars. The seeds were brought to this country, sown in beds under glass and transplanted on what is now Santa Rosa avenue in 1885, when the trees were about 2 feet tall. They are now about 80 feet high, with their branches spreading from 30 to 40 feet near the ground. The trees are illuminated from Christmas eve to New Year night.

Popular Pipe Material

Meerschaum is the name of the clay from which meerschaum pipes are made. In mineralogy meerschaum is called sepiolite. The material comes chiefly from Asia Minor. The pipes are made in Germany and in Austria, Vienna being the center of the manufacture.

Plane Far Outclassed by Feathered Marvels

In flying efficiency the bird is far superior to the most modern plane, though the bird wastes considerable energy in its aerial journeys, while the plane wastes none.

The bird's forward motion of the wing after the downward stroke is an uneconomical way of applying power, because the stroke is wasted, and the air friction increased. As a result, speed is retarded. On the other hand, the propeller of a plane has no lost motion.

Yet less than two ounces of fuel in the form of fat is sufficient to carry a small bird at a high rate of speed over a course of 2,400 miles, according to scientists. A thousand-pound plane, if as economical of fuel, would consume only a pint of gasoline in a 20 mile flight instead of many gallons.

A vulture or crane, after a few preliminary wing beats, is able to accomplish something beyond any plane yet invented. Setting its wings, it is able to mount in sweeping circles to a great height, overcoming gravity without exertion. Both the soaring and sailing birds are proficient in the use of several factors in the art of flying that have not been mastered in principle or practice by the most skilful aviators.

The size of the wings seems to make no difference in the migratory flight. Though the Carolina rail has small, short wings, apparently ill adapted to long journeys, it crosses the Caribbean sea with ease. The humming bird, whose wings move so fast they can not be seen, crosses the Gulf of Mexico, a distance of 500 miles, in a single night. In fact, birds with small wings, with the exception of the rail, are invariably faster than their long-winged consorts.

The humming bird is capable of a trick that probably never will be met by the plane. When extracting the nectar from flowers, it finds it necessary to fly backwards. Nature still maintains her supremacy in the air over man.

Two New Captains Have Been Elected by Bears

Two new captains have been named by athletic teams of the University of California, following the completion of the regular intercollegiate season. They are Everett "Spud" Mossman, distance runner, who will head the track team in 1931, and Harry Butler, third baseman, new skipper of the Bear nine.

Mossman, who accomplished the remarkable feat of winning both mile and two-mile runs against Stanford, succeeds Alfonso "Al" Pogolotti, hurdler, as track captain. Butler will fill the shoes of John Vallanos, second baseman.

Singer Thinks He Has Improved 75 Per Cent

Al Singer believes he has improved 75 per cent since he fought his first bout on December 14, 1928, with Tony Canzoneri as his opponent. That ended in a draw, and because Tony gave Sammy Mandell, lightweight king, a hard battle last year Singer figures he can whip the champion. He believes he is just as fast and has a harder punch than Mandell, and will concenerate on science first and socking second when he opposes the Rockford Flash on July 17 at the Yankee stadium.

Star Army Coach

Second Lieutenant Harry E. Wilson will report next fall to assist Maj. Ralph I. Sasse, head coach of the Army football team.

He was assigned to the army flying school in Texas and won his wings as a pilot. He has been a member of the crack pursuit group stationed at Selfridge field.

SPORTS POSSIBLE FOR NIGHT PLAY

Games Are Not Likely to Be Popular in Big Cities.

Baseball, racing and college football can be held at night satisfactorily from a technical standpoint. But it is unlikely that any of them will be popular in big league cities except in such cases where the night is climatically preferable to daylight.

Night college football really attracted attention to the possibilities of night baseball promotion. That was a move begun by Southern universities. They found that football practice and intercollegiate contests were objectionable because of the high temperatures prevailing down South during the football season, and tried night because of its greater coolness.

In localities where temperatures are lower, colleges still attract capacity crowds to daylight games—so why turn to the night?

It remained for one institution to discover that its night football program was more lucrative than its day program—Drake university at Des Moines. And it was this financial success that induced Lee Keyser of the Des Moines baseball club to embark on his interesting venture into night baseball.

Ruth

Ruth's Gentle Hands.

Ruth is the latter part of the word Truth, after we take off the first T. If we may pun a bit, truly Ruth was true to her ideals. And you generally are, aren't you, Ruth?

To take your last syllable first, or the latter part of your name, rather, the Hebrew word, UTH, in ancient days, meant to speak in season. If you will read the Bible story you will see that she did, and that most effectively.

The gentle hands of Ruth are capable both of labor and caress.

The fore part of your name, Ru, had the general meaning of a thought voiced "with the breath." We would say that it represented the words that "come from the heart."

One of your dangers is that you will make use of the first three letters of your name only, RUT, and get into the rut of being the slavey for the household. It is all right for you to be kind and gracious, for you are happiest when doing so, but learn the great lesson of letting others serve you once in a while.

One of the great laws of life for you to learn is, "we love most those for whom we do most, and they love most those for whom they do most." Therefore, learn to accept graciously, and attract more to yourself thereby.

Taking the letters of your name separately, the R would signify both Resourcefulness and Righteousness; the U stands for the Unknown, the mystery of your gentle heart and willing hands; the T shows us your Tidiness, for which surely you are well known by now.

Your last letter, H, can produce in you the Haughtiness that you must exert when temptation shows its ugly head in your presence.

Your fearlessness may be exemplified in the life of the Ruth in the Bible. In more modern terms, it is seen in Ruth Elder, the famous aviatrix.

Sally

"I wonder what's become of Sally," as the song has it, indicates your tendency to be "Sally in a corner."

Aunt Sally.

Always there when wanted, and almost never in the way, you are the salt of the earth, the consoler of the race.

The dictionary says that Sally means to issue, to leap, to rush out suddenly. It indicates a sudden overflow of spirits, but it suggests that that overflow will start from the corner, from the inconspicuous place.

Your smile is almost fairylike, with its funny little combination of sauciness and timidity. Children just love you, as do most of us grown folks. If it's buttons to sew on, toys to fix, or any one of a thousand other small but necessary duties, you're it, Sally.

But I don't mean that you can't do things in a big way. We have Sallys who have made definite careers for themselves.

Of course, Aunt Sally as seen here, may not be you at all, yet.

One of the ancient meanings of the equivalent of your name was to forgive or pardon, and I know you will forgive me, Sally, if I just don't want you for a career.

Maybe I can sort of appropriate you for my sister, Sally, now, and then later on have you for my Aunt Sally. Anyway you do fit all of those things, even if you go on and make a career and blast all my hopes.

You haven't asked me to marry you yet, but I think you would be just the girl who could do that, or for some splendid, timid man, made fearful by your wise and practical nature.

Anyway, you can go on dictating to us about our food and clothes, our cuts and bruises, and we will behave.

Not All Peoples Wore Gloves

The early custom of wearing gloves is mostly confined to Continental Europe. In China the long-sleeved robes made gloves unnecessary and so they were unknown, but in Japan hunters and archers found them most convenient. Among the American Indians only the Eskimos are known to have worn gloves. They have not been found among the African tribes. In fact, gloves are not traceable to the tropics.

MILL WORKER BENEFITED

Picked Up After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Towanda, Pa.—"I was working in a silk mill and got so tired and rundown that I weighed only 89 pounds. I was not well enough to do my work. As soon as I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to pick up. After being married for thirteen years, I had a baby boy and the next year I had another boy who now weighs 37 pounds and is healthy as a bear. The Vegetable Compound has helped me in a dozen ways and I hope others will try it too."—Mrs. C. B. Johnson, Webb Street, R. D. #6, Towanda, Pennsylvania.

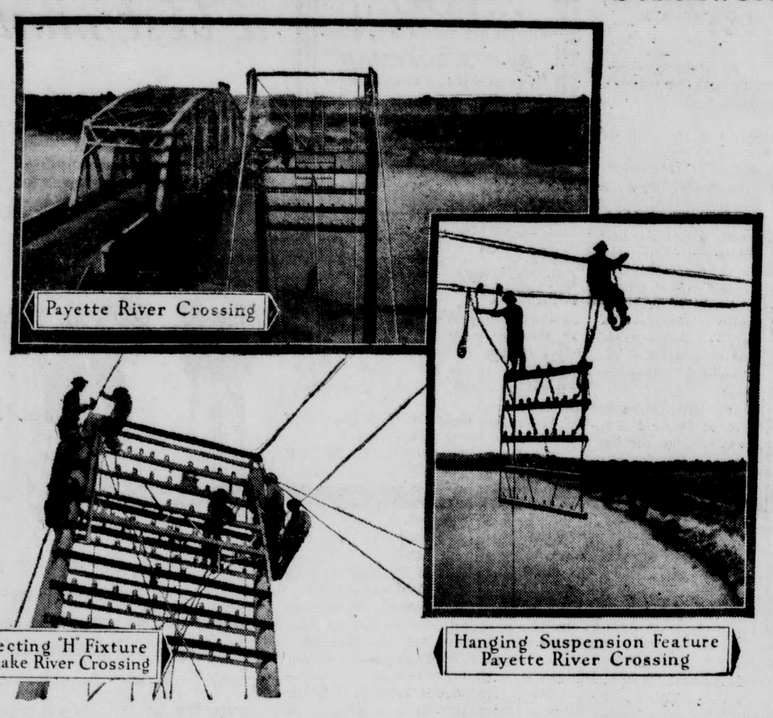
Catenary Spans Carry Open-Wire Telephone Circuits Across Rivers in Southwest



Payette River Crossing

Erecting "H" Fixture Snake River Crossing

Hanging Suspension Feature Payette River Crossing

IN addition to carrying on a comprehensive plan of toll cable construction, the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has strung many open wire circuits. One of the most interesting examples of open wire construction was the stringing of copper circuits across the Snake and Payette rivers in Idaho. These formed a part of the Boise-Huntington toll line. The catenary spans across these two rivers required the erection of "H" fixtures and the placing of channel cross-arms and suspension arms.

The most notable example of this kind of construction is the catenary span across the Gila river in Arizona which is more than 2,300 feet long, about 800 feet longer than the Brooklyn bridge. This is said to be the longest and largest catenary span for carrying telephone wires in the world.

Reduced Rates Offered Users Of Electricity

New and reduced rates for electric light and power service go into effect on March 1. The new rates, according to Walter Kellogg, will save consumers $2,400,000 a year.

This," Kellogg says, "is the fourth major reduction in electric rates in the last nine years. There was a reduction of $2,000,000 in 1921; another of $2,500,000 in 1923; a third of $1,935,000 in 1928, and the fourth of $2,400,000, which now becomes effective.

"The principal beneficiaries under the present reduction will be the lighting consumers of the company, who will save $1,570,000 a year, or 65 per cent of the total. The greatest reduction falls in the top lighting rate, which now becomes 4½ cents a kilowatt hour. All users of light will benefit by this reduction. Large users, such as stores and commercial buildings, will save as much as 10 per cent on the average. In cases where the use of energy will be great enough to come within the "low blocks,' where the reduction is 20 per cent, the saving will be even larger.

"All Pacific Gas and Electric territory will feel the reduction in the lighting rate. In San Francisco, Oakland and other East Bay cities, the saving will amount to $872,000 annually. The other cities and towns served by the company, taken together, will save $538,000. In the rural areas, the saving will aggregate $160,000.

"Rates, where lighting is combined with other household service, will become especially low. The first 30 kilowatt hours will cost only 4½ cents. The next 140 drops to 3½ cents and all over 170 kilowatt hours cost only 1½ cents, plus a small service charge. Practically all domestic consumers can quality for this rate. All that is required is an installation of 1000 watts in small socket appliances, such as a toaster and an electric iron, a waffle iron and a heater or any two ordinary appliances. Domestic consumers who use 30 kilowatt hours or more per month will benefit by qualifying for this schedule.

"Reductions in the power rates will save general power consumers $325,000 a year and industrial power consumers $127,000. Lighting service, strictly incidental to the use of industrial power, will herefater be charged on the power rate, when such service does not exceed 20 per cent of the power load, and the power load is 50 horsepower or more. All energy in such cases, however, must be taken at the power voltage. High power factor will be rewarded by a discount from the regular rate.

"An important reduction is that of $112,000 to the users of agricultural power."

Bayview Heights Joins to Belmont

Belmont will be enlarged this week by the addition of the territory comprised in the business section of Bayview Heights. The tract was voted into the town of Belmont at an election by a vote of 48 to 1. One other of the 50 votes cast was thrown out.

This move will give Belmont jurisdiction over Harbor boulevard, principal east and west artery of the tract, and the street destined to be the main thoroughfare to the Port San Francisco development.

At an election a few months ago when the proposal of annexing the whole of the Bayview Tract to Belmont was voted on, the proposal lost by a few votes.

The legal efforts of Mrs. Beal to secure the custody of the children have been before the courts for some time, and came into prominence just prior to Christmas, when Mrs. Beal's present husband and her former husband engaged in a fist fight in Hillsborough.

What's It All About?

Norma Shearer, star of "The Divorcee"—A Metro-Goldwyn Mayer Picture

By FRANK WHITBECK

You pray for something great in moving pictures. You ask for it. You beg for it . . . When you do get something great . . . it hits you like a blow in the face.

The movies are coming adult. They are growing up. I walked into a preview of Norma Shearer's "The Divorcee," expecting another ten-twenty-thirty love yarn. I walked out with my head spinning.

Here was a picture. Here was one of the reasons that Broadway is going to become just another New York bypath.

Reviewers may as well save their superlatives. There is nothing about the picture that calls out flashy praise. It doesn't need to be called a super-super production. Fancy language would belittle "The Divorcee. It is art . . . the new art we've been crying for. It is screen drama . . . handled as we've been praying it might be handled since the first continuity was written.

"Ex-wife" has become "The Divorcee." The sizzling sex book that was a genuine human document, as well as a popular best seller, was purchased for the pictures. Will Hays groaned . . . in public. Even those of us who ought to know better . . . set ourselves for a shower of cheap, suggestive bilge. That is what usually happens to best sellers that have racy love themes.

Writers and directors did things to this story that are not glaringly obvious . . but they make the story glow and sparkle in this drama.

Not that there isn't sex in "The Divorcee. There is. But it is the deep, fundamental, gripping sex life . . . with no attempt to be coy and nasty. Sex? Yes . . . of the kind that increases, rather than wrecks, your admiration of mankind.

Four performers gave themselves wonderfully to a marvelous adaption of the book. Two of them were but recently from the legitimate stage. Two of them were veterans of the pictures. Norma Shearer created the role of Jerry. Her performance, had it been on the New York stage, would have sent the high-brow critics into a frenzy of praise. Chester Morris brought the best of the stage to the screen. Conrad Nagel played a frustrated, loyal lover, with the quiet emphasis of an artist . . . Robert Montgomery played the young man-about-town. Montgomery nearly stole the show . . . .

Four performers . . . credit them with playing in the picture which is satisfying to the heart and mind. Credit them with taking the best of the delapidated silent movie, the senile stage, and constructing real drama from the fragments. Credit them with making the picture which shows that the movies are becoming adult.

Will increase your energy and assist you in getting through the day without being so tired. Worth much more than the price we ask.

Fifty Years Ago

Times-Gazette, May 29, 1880

Moonlight excursions down the creek are again popular.

The street superintendent has covered the bridge on A street with a new coat of gravel.

Sime Knight has started up his stage for the summer season. At present the condition of the roads will permit him to run only to La Honda, but he hopes to go through to Pescadero next week.

Little Johnnie Poole, 8-year-old son of the well-known expressman, while climbing on a fence at his father's house, as a good many youngsters have the habit of doing, suddenly lost his balance and fell. In falling, his foot caught in the pickets of the fence and left him suspended, head downward, until his cries brought relief. Happily he escaped with a badly wrenched and sprained leg. Little boys should keep off fences.

Page's Mill, near the Alpine, will start running about the 10th of June.

A party from Redwood, including A. H. Nutting, passed through Halfmoon Bay for the fishing grounds.

The Hotel Del Monte, recently built by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company at Monterey, will be opened for the public on Wednesday, the 2nd proximo. On the Saturday following, the 5th proximo, the opening ball will be given. A large number of invitations will be sent throughout the state, and special trains will be run for those desiring to attend.

ARMLESS BOATMAN PROVIDED WITH ODD TELEPHONE DEVICE

JOHN JOHNSON, who lost both of his arms in a railroad accident some years ago, has a boathouse at Beverly Harbor, Mass. He has lots of customers who call up to reserve boats, and often fishermen who stay out after mealtime and wish to call their homes to make sure their dinners will be kept ready for them. So John's telephone is quite busy.

When the order came in for a telephone at Jonnson's boathouse, Bill Green, installation foreman at Salem, found it quite a problem to supply service for a man with no arms. He finally devised an iron bracket to hold the receiver close to the user's ear when speaking into the transmitter, and instead of the hook switch he installed a switch which is operated by the foot while talking. The illustration shows Mr. Johnson at his telephone.

La Honda Pioneer Buried Wednesday

Funeral services were held in Palo Alto on Wednesday for Richard Bartley, 83, well-known pioneer of La Honda, who passed away at the Palo Alto hospital on Tuesday following a brief illness. Services were held privately at the parlors of Roller & Hapgood in Palo Alto.

Mr. Bartley was one of the early residents of La Honda, who came to live there from Canada in 1869. At first he engaged in the lumbering business in the mountains near La Honda, but after a few years of lumbering, devoted his time to farming. During the time that the Hanson Company was lumbering off the hills of this county, Mr. Bartley was employed as chief ox driver, and had charge of the numerous ox teams which were used at that time in bringing the logs to the mills and in transporting lumber from the mountains to the wharves at Redwood.

Mr. Bartley was considered one of the influential citizens of the mountain district, and his friendship was sought by all the office seekers of the early days.

Mr. Bartley is survived by three sons, W. R. Bartley of Palo Alto; H. M. Bartley of La Honda, and H. M. Bartley of San Jose, and by four daughters, Mrs. F. K. Towne of this city; Mrs. Maude Hamilton of San Jose; Mrs. Charlotte Woodhams of La Honda, and Mrs. Leila B. Swaine of San Francisco.

FIRE DEPARTMENT BURNS OVER GRASS

A grass fire near the intersection of Spruce street and the railroad tracks called out the fire department late Tuesday afternoon. No damage was done, and the firemen burned the field over to remove the menace of future fires.

The department has been busy this week burning over grass fields throughout the city to reduce the fire hazard this summer.

CARS DAMAGED IN WRECK

In an accident at the intersection of Jefferson and Cleveland streets Tuesday evening, cars driven by Alex Casey, Woodside, and Howard Keplenger, La Honda, were quite badly damaged. The accident occurred when Casey was driving east on Jefferson and Keplenger driving on Cleveland both entered the intersection at the some time. The accident was investigated by Officer Fleishman. Both cars had to be towed away.

How to Play BRIDGE
Series 1929-30 by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright, 1930, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 82

It is not often that a player is given an opportunity to fool the opponents as in the following hand, but all our readers must admit that the declarer made a most unusual and clever play and was well entitled to his game and rubber.

Example Hand

	Hearts — 10, 8, 7, 4, 2 Clubs — 10, 9, 2 Diamonds — 7, 6, 2 Spades — 10, 9
Hearts — Q, 9, 4 Clubs — K, 8, 5 Diamonds — K, 9, 8, 4, 3 Spades — J, 7	Y A B Z	Hearts — J, 5 Clubs — Q, J, 7, 3 Diamonds — 10, 5 Spades — K, 8, 6, 5, 3
	Hearts — A, K, 6 Clubs — A, 6, 4 Diamonds — A, Q, 7 Spades — A, Q, 4, 2

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one no trump and all passed. A led the four of Diamonds, the six was played from dummy, B played the ten, and Z took the trick with the ace (not the queen). Z then played three rounds of hearts, winning the first two with the king and ace, and A taking the third with the queen. A now had to lead, and played the nine of diamonds, as he assumed that, as Z had won the first trick with the ace over B's ten, B must hold the queen. But to his astonishment the knave of diamonds won the trick in dummy, which hand made two more tricks in hearts, and so Z and Y won game and rubber. A clever piece of play! Needless to say that if Z had won the first diamond trick with the queen, as practically every player would have done, he couldn't have gone game. When A obtained the lead, he would undoubtedly have led clubs and so have prevented the jack of diamonds from becoming a re-entry. It also enabled Z to take the spade finesse and thus make a game that otherwise was impossible.

Answer to Problem No. 26

	Hearts — J, 7, 5 Clubs — A, 9, 7 Diamonds — Spades — K, 9
Hearts — 10, 9, 4, 3 Clubs — 8, 6, 5 Diamonds — 3 Spades — 4	Y A B Z	Hearts — 6 Clubs — 10 Diamonds — Q, 10, 7 Spades — Q, J, 10, 7
	Hearts — 8 Clubs — none Diamonds — K, 8, 6, 4 Spades — A, 8, 6, 5

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win eight of the nine tricks against any defense?

The plan of play to follow in the problem is to take out the spade and diamond from A's hand and the club from B's hand, so that A can be forced in the lead and obliged to lead back either hearts or clubs.

Solution: At trick one Z should lead the king of diamonds. At trick two Z should lead the five of spades and win in Y's hand with the king. At trick three Y should lead the ace of clubs on which Z should discard the eight of hearts.

At trick four Y should lead the seven of hearts and A may (a) win the trick with the nine of hearts or (b) refuse to win it.

(a) If A wins the fourth trick with the nine of hearts, he must lead either a heart or a club, in which case Y must win two hearts and one club, or one heart and two clubs. On these three tricks B and Z must discard. As Z has thus the chance to discard after B, Z must win the last two tricks either with the ace and one spade or the ace of spades and a diamond.

(b) If A refuses to take trick four with his nine or ten of hearts, Y should play the nine of clubs and follow with the seven of clubs. A must then lead a heart so that Y has thus won two heart and one club tricks as in (a) and from then on the result is the same. Should A refuse to take either club trick, by playing his eight on Y's nine, Y leads his five of hearts and the final result still gives A B only one trick. Play out all variations for practice.

Answer to Problem No. 27

	Hearts — 7, 6 Clubs — none Diamonds — K Spades — K, 10, 6, 5, 4, 3
Hearts — 8 Clubs — 6, 5 Diamonds — 7, 6, 5 Spades — J, 9, 8	Y A B Z	Hearts — J Clubs — K, J, 10, 9, 8, 7 Diamonds — Q, 9 Spades — none
	Hearts — A Clubs — A, Q, 4, 3, 2 Diamonds — 10, 8, 4 Spades — none

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win seven of the nine tricks against any defense?

The plan of play in this problem is to take the heart out of B's hand and throw him in the lead on the second diamond trick so that he will be forced to lead clubs to Z. The latter must be careful to play the ten and eight of diamonds on the first two rounds of that suit so that he will be able to throw A in the lead on the sixth trick.

Solution: At trick one, Z should lead the ten of diamonds, winning the trick in Y's hand with the king. At trick two Y should lead the six of hearts, winning the trick in Z's hand with the ace. At trick three, Z should lead the eight of diamonds, forcing B to win the trick with the queen (or with the nine if the queen were played on the first trick). Y discards a spade. At trick four B must lead the seven of clubs and Z should win the trick with the queen, Y discarding a spade. At trick five Z should lead the ace of clubs and Y should discard another spade. At trick six, Z should lead the four of diamonds and A is thus forced in the lead and at trick seven must lead a spade. Y should win this trick by covering A's lead, and then should lead the remaining good spade. At trick nine, Y should lead the seven of hearts so Y Z thus win seven of the nine tricks against any defense.

Rural Girls Are Fine Housekeepers

Washington.—Girls on the more than 6,000,000 farm homes of the United States are showing a keen interest in the arts of home making and in many instances are telling their mothers how to obtain the best results from meager incomes, according to Miss Mary Rokahr, home management specialist of the Agriculture department.

Returning from a trip which carried her through most of the eastern and central states, where she talked with hundreds of farm housewives and their daughters, Miss Rokahr said the modern girl on the farm probably in many cases will be a better housewife than her mother.

"Everywhere I went I found the woman on the farm eager to learn how she might improve her home and obtain a better mode of living on the slight means at her disposal. Most of the girls, however, were better informed than their mothers and many showed marked talent in restoring furniture, making clothes, cooking, and the manifold tasks of a housewife."

One of the first questions asked by most housewives she met, Miss Rokahr said, was what labor saving equipment she ought to purchase. Proper methods of buying what the farm home needs was second in questions asked. Then the farm wife wanted to know how she most efficiently might divide the housework among the family.

"I do not wish to make odious comparisons," Miss Rokahr added, "but it is my impression that the average farm housewife has succeeded better than most city mothers in creating the true spirit of a home. It is on the farm, especially in the West, that we still find the pioneer spirit."

The average amount of cash received by the farmer for his salable products is $600 annually, Miss Rokahr said, while the average farm housewife desired at least $1,200 to properly maintain her home. This would be the equivalent of about $1,800 in the city if allowance is made for the many farm products used by the family which must be bought in town.

In the year since Miss Rokahr assumed her duties as an expert adviser to the farm housewives of the nation, 12 pamphlets have been published outlining model budgets for different states. Miss Rokahr emphasized that it is not possible to recommend a standard budget for the farm home because of varying crop, climate and other conditions in different sections. It is planned to have a budget adapted to each section.

Living conditions on many farm homes are still extremely primitive despite the inroads of machinery to lighten the farmer's burdens. Only 10 per cent of the farm homes visited were found to have running water, and only seven per cent had electricity. Despite this lack of modern conveniences, however, Miss Rokahr expressed the view that the farm housewife in most cases is keeping step with her city sister in providing a real home.

Ancient Thousand-Year Lease

Oshkosh, Wis.—Publicity about the maturing of some 999-year leases in England has brought to light here a 1,000-year lease drawn May 1, 1813, in England. It is owned by Mrs. Anne E. Reed of this city.

The instrument is an original and has been retained in Mrs. Reed's family since 1813. It was brought to America in 1886 when her grandfather migrated here.

Although the document was drawn for the simple purpose of leasing an apartment described as "Skinner's Tenement," with certain provisos, the script covers a piece of heavy parchment paper two feet by three.

The parties to it are John Perkin and William Prower, and Adam K. Baynes and William Symons. It says that Perkin, as owner of certain property in the community of Week St. Mary in the County of Cornwall, and Prower, his son-in-law, agree to construct a tenement for Baynes and Symons. Perkin is called a "yeoman." Prower a "carpenter" and Baynes a "gentleman."

Upon the deaths of the contracting parties, it says, heirs and assigns of Baynes and Symons and Perkin and Prower were to continue the contract for an uninterrupted period of 1,000 years.

A comparatively high fee was paid for the execution of the indenture, as is indicated by the £1 10 shilling stamp affixed by the government.

Although Mrs. Reed can trace her relationship to William Prower, little effort has been made by her to settle the long term contract. She believes the expense involved would more than offset profits which have accrued.

Massachusetts Coast Gets New Radio Beacon

North Truro, Mass.—A radio beacon system has been added to the equipment of the Highland Light Signal station, one of the principal guardians of shipping in treacherous Cape Cod waters.

Information is broadcast to ships at sea four times daily, and in thick weather the conditions are broadcast continuously with one minute blasts and two minutes silence. Any ship equipped with a radio set may listen in.

The new device is expected to prove a great benefit to the shipping interests.

Claims Pre-Birth Memory

Newcastle, Ind.—Edward Stirk, Newcastle, claims he is able to remember 40 years before the time he was born. Stirk set down his age at one hundred, admitting he had lived but 60 years in this world, but said he could remember at least 40 years of existence in another planet or state.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Clouds Are Named

Astronomers and weather scientists have names for every type of cloud. Shapes of clouds depend upon conditions within and around them. Therefore, a single name tells a complete story. Some of the more important are: Cirrus (ringlet very high up), Stratus (spread out), Cumulus (a heap, or piling up), and Nimbus (rain cloud).

Blind Ex-Sailor Finds Romance at News Stand

Glendale, Calif.—Totally blind for twelve years, Randall H. (Al) Lindsey has operated a magazine stand and newspaper agency at the corner of Brand boulevard and Broadway, this city's busiest corner. He started in his business eight years ago, four years after he had been blinded by an explosion on the U. S. S. Des Moines, on which he was serving as a sailor.

Ever since then the blind merchant has peddled his papers and magazines, able to go to the rack and pick out any publication his patrons desire without an instant's hesitation. He knows the voices of his customers and can call scores of them by name.

Several months ago a new voice fell on his ears when a girl asked him for a magazine. The ease with which he reached into the rack for the magazine impressed the girl and she stopped to chat with him for a few minutes. These visits became regular affairs, and the acquaintance ripened until love and romance lightened the darkness of Al's life.

The girl was Miss Bernice Hahn and she will become Mrs. Randall H. Lindsey in a wedding ceremony performed in the home that Al has bought with his savings at No. 529 North Concord street. Justice Burt L. Wix will perform the ceremony in the presence of a few intimate friends of the couple, the selection falling on Judge Wix because of his long acquaintance with Lindsey in the American Legion post.

Al intends to keep on at the same old stand after his wedding. "You know, when a man gets married he just naturally has to keep on earning a living for his family," he declared.

The Schools and Good Manners

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

They have organized a campaign recently at the Princeton (New Jersey) high school for the development of good manners, so the newspapers tell us. I had supposed that training in manners and courtesy had its seat in the home. It was once so at least, but very likely I am wrong. Mother taught us to take off our hats when speaking to ladies, to show respect for old people, to rise when anyone came into the room, to keep quiet when visitors were talking, and to say "please excuse me" when walking in front of anyone. I suppose it isn't done that way now. The schools must take care of manners as they are now responsible for morals and for the general education of young people. It is heartening, however, to know that some one has recognized the fact that good manners among young people are decadent and that a revival of interest in courtesy is in order.

Now as to taking off the hat. I see every day hundreds of young men from the best families of the country, or at least so these young fellows admit. They walk through the halls of college buildings with their hats on their heads cocked at every variety of angle. They stop to talk to young ladies with no remote conception that it would be better manners if they took off their hats. You see them in college offices sitting with their hats on—in their own houses, every where in fact. The fact that young women are present makes no difference; the hats are still on. Possibly the reason many do not wear hats at all is that it is too much trouble to take them off when in the presence of a lady.

I don't know why we have lost an interest in the refinements and the courtesies of life as we undoubtedly have. Are we more selfishly looking after our own pleasures and interests than we once did, or has the hurry and bustle of the age left us too little time to be polite? I was out driving yesterday on a somewhat congested highway. It was interesting to me to see how little consideration the majority of drivers gave to the comfort or safety of others. They splashed my car with mud as they went by; they cut in when there was scarcely time or space for the maneuver. They all seemed in a mad hurry to get somewhere regardless of other people's rights or safety. If the schools are to give training in good manners there is a wide and uncultivated field open in the matter of automobile manners.

Even if one is selfishly looking out for his own interests good manners furnish a most direct road to the accomplishment of one's purposes. Everyone is well disposed toward the good mannered man. It is a good field for the schools to work in, but it is after all a burden which should not rest there. If young people are ill-mannered the difficulty and the solution really lie at home. Our children are ill-mannered most likely because we ourselves are. The schools will have a hard time unless the home becomes different.

Uncover Historic Irish Spot

Dublin.—The long-sought golgotha of King Conaire, one of the greatest Irish kings, who was killed 100 years before Christ, has been discovered only an hour's walk from the center of Dublin.

The discovery of the charnel house, where the king and his soldiers were massacred while at a great banquet, and where their bones, treasures and drinking goblets have lain undisturbed for 2,000 years, rivals the discovery of the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen in Egypt.

American capital will be heavily invested in bringing to light all the matters connected with the excavation to be shortly instituted, according to Assistant Keeper Grogan of the National museum, who has been placed in charge of the work.

King Conaire, who attained his lofty role through his father and his own prowess, was killed by men whose own death sentence he had remitted, being opposed to capital punishment, history records.

The careers of Conaire and his father, King Edirsceal, Circa 50 B. C., were intimately bound up with the fate of the Ernean people, a Munster folk of militaristic character who had overrun the central plain of Ireland and extended their dominion to the north coast.

After being driven from Ulster by the Clan Rudhraighe, they still dominated Dal Riada and there were indications that even Ulster accepted their suzerainty.

King Edirsceal fell in battle against the south Leinstermen, and Conaire avenged his father, driving the foe back and annexing Ossory.

As king, Conaire rounded up various bands of brigands who had been condemned to death by their own fathers and deported them to England.

But the brigands returned to Ireland, and one night succeeded in waylaying King Conaire while he passed the night with his retinue of warriors at the great hotel Da Dearga at Gleann An Smoil, near Dublin. Here the king and his followers were massacred and the famous hotel Da Dearga, which once was a shrine, was burned. Until two months ago, its location remained a mystery even to scholars.

"No," answered Miss Cayenne. "Mother is so old-fashioned that she thinks local gossips can get one talked about sufficiently without hiring a press agent."

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.

Today, the prescription he wrote in 1885 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases; old folks liked it for it never gripes; children liked its pleasant taste. All drug stores today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

CLARENCE SAUNDERS SOLE OWNER OF MY NAME

Menlo Park

Among those who graduated from the high school of Santa Clara College last week were Joseph McCarthy and Desmond Sullivan, two bright young men, who are destined to achieve greatness and who may secure a niche in the hall of fame.

Following the usual custom of decorating the graves of departed brothers the members of Menlo Parlor N. S. G. W. will march to Holy Cross cemetery this morning and place the Stare and Stripes and the Bear Flag on the last resting places of members of the organiaztion. The ceremony is impressive and will be attended by both Native Sons and Native Daughters.

The Holt place, formerly the Boyd Braden home on Amelia and MacBain avenue, was purchased recently by Frank McH. Campbell, who recently leased his auto camp on the highway.

Mrs. Frank R. Cain has rented her home for the summer to L. R. Wertheimer of San Francisco. Mrs. Cain will spend the summer months in Chicago, her former home for many years.

The many friends of Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., are elated over his success in securing the much-sought after position of grand trustee of the Native Sons of the Golden West. At the annual meeting of the grand parlor at Merced last week young Shortridge was chosen after a stiff battle. He won fourth in a group of seven trustees. This was the third attempt for many of the successful ones while it was Shortridge's first. This is the first time in thirty years that a grand trustee has been chosen from the Peninsula. Attorney W. R. McShane, with offices in San Francisco, but who has a residence at Atherton, was also chosen as a grand trustee. Menlo Parlor celebrated the honor of having a grand officer last evening by giving a banquet to Shortridge. All the members, together with invited guests, were present to do honor to the new official.

Miss Myrtle May, 18, residing on Santa Cruz avenue, who was run down by Roy Smith while on his way to a fire last Saturday, has left the Palo Alto hospital and is at her home. Smith was in his machine rushing to a blaze on Santa Cruz avenue, when he ran into the girl on the highway, near Monroe's real estate office. It is a miracle that the girl was not instantly killed. Smith was going at a high rate of speed. He is a volunteer fireman. Miss May suffered a deep cut close to her right eye and maybe permanently scarred. She is an unusually beautiful girl.

Miss Myrtle May, through her guardian, Miss Annie May, has brought an action for damages against Roy Smith and the Menlo Park Fire Department for $45,000.

Mrs. E. E. Quayle was given a birthday surprise by the members of All Saints Episcopal Church of Palo Alto at the home of Mrs. C. T. Woodward Waverly street Thursday of last week. Mrs. Quayle is a very charming woman and a devoted church worker.

It will cost about $7,500 to build the synagague and community center building planned for Menlo Park by the Jewish resirents of the district embracing Menlo Park, Palo Alto and Atherton. A good start was made in the work lately when $800 was realized at a big picnic held in Menlo Park. The building will be 110 feet deep by 40 feet wide and will be erected on Stanford boulevard, about one block from the highway.

The council met Tuesday evening with all members present. C. A. March in a communication to the council complained of fire hazards about her home on Valparaiso and urged that something be done to relieve the situation. The communication was referred to the fire chief.

E. M. Rankin, in a letter to the council, said the insurance policy on the city car would expire on June 12 and asked for a renewal of the policy. Dale thought that all the agents should share in the business. The matter was deferred until other agents could be heard from.

City Engineer George A. Kneese presented his resignation to the council which was accepted after some discussion on motion of Crane, seconded by Anderson.

In his resignation Kneese made this explanation:

"I hereby tender my resignation as city engineer of Menlo Park to take effect at the pleasure of your Honorable Council.

"In connection with this request and having been apprised by various accounts in the public press of adverse criticisms directed against me regarding the bill presented for engineering work and services on the Stanford Park paving project, I feel it incumbent upon myself to offer an explanation in this matter.

"This bill was only delivered upon explicit request that it be compiled. It was explained that a number of cases have occurred where the street proceedings have been abandoned, but the same engineering data was afterwards used for new proceedings by the same engineer and the costs thereof were properly included in the incidental expenses of such new construction and the payment of orginal costs were thereby deferred.

The bill presented represents only the payroll and the overhead costs incurred up to the abandonment of the proceedings, and an engineering fee as provided in Section 17 of the Improvement Act of 1911 In view of the fact, that probably ninety percent of the engineering work on this project had been completed and bearing in mind that the usual engineering fee is between four and five percent. on the cost of the work, I submit that this fee, which represents only slightly over one percent on this cost, is indeed reasonable. However, I should have been glad to look for payment as a part of the incidental expenses of future construction when carried to completion.

"This, gentlemen, has been my stand in the matter of this bill and it is unfortunate that the statement should have been made that it was intended at any time to be held as a club over any one. Notwithstanding this fact, and in order not to cause any embarrassment to any one since this criticism has been voiced, I feel that my resignation is probably the proper solution.

Even though relieved of my official duties as your city engineer, I shall consider it a pleasure at all times in the future whenever called upon, to co-operate with your Honorable Council and the City of Menlo Park."

James Armstrong, representing the Stanford Park Improvement Association, said the property owners in his locality wanted the paving done. He thought that an engineer employed on a monthly salary should be chosen to superintend all street improvements.

City Attorney Whitworth declared that Stanford Park was not the only place in the city that needed street work. He suggested that a citizens' committee be selected to take up all such matters and report to the council. The committee could work out a plan of operation that would meet with the aproval of everyone. The council thought well of the suggestion and at a special meeting Tuesday evening names will be suggested for the committee. Blake declared there was no co-operation from the Stanford Park property owners in the past. They did not act when having an opportunity.

Crane reported that he had secured the necessary data to proceed with the underpass at the grammar school, and was ready to meet with the school trustees to discuss the matter. It is proposed that the underpass will be built by the Menlo Park School District, the city cooperating.

Mayor Weeden said that the general fund was delinquent to the amount of $113 and that the claims could not be paid. He explained that the auditor would send a check for $2400, tax funds in a day or two. The council agreed to meet Thursday evening to pay the claims on file. It is learned the amount to be received from the auditor is only $1672.77.

The council adjourned out of respect to the memory of John Buelna, a pioneer of Menlo Park who died last Saturday, to meet on next Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Harvey Raymond, considered one of the prettiest women on the Peninsula, was married recently in Texas to Mr. Doyle, a prominent business man of the Lone Star State. The Doyles will reside permanently in Texas.

John Ryan, city treasurer and owner of the Menlo Hardware Company, has sold his interest in the San Carlos Hardware store to his partner there.

The glorious sunshine and beautiful oaks of Menlo Park were known as far back as 1792, when Captain George Vancouver camped here while on his way to the Monterey mission. He was so impressed with its likeness to old English parks and estates that he made a note of his impressions in his diary, recently found. Vancouver states in his notes that he came down El Camino Real from San Francisco, and about three quarters of a mile from the two giant redwoods he spread his tent under a clump of live oaks. This would fix the locality a short distance behind the Peralta Pigeon Farm, where in early days stood a group of giant oaks, but which has since fallen before the woodman's ax. The padres in passing frequently found shelter under the oaks. The place was finally named after an Irish estate having large oaks. This bears out the impression of Vancouver. In 1854 two young men named Oliver and McGlynn bought the property on which the trees were grown. The purchase consisted of several hundred acres. The place was named Menlo Park after an old castle situated on an ancient estate in Galway, known as Menlo Park. As youngsters, Oliver and McGlynn played about the grounds near the castle, erected in the fifteenth century, and when they acquired the estate here they named it after their youthful romping grounds in Ireland. The buyers erected imposing gates in front of the property on which they boldly inscribed "Menlo Park." In vain have historians searched for the origin of the word Menlo. Like California, the origin is clouded in obscurity.

K. L. Martin, the plumber, was rushed to the Palo Alto hospital yesterday and operated on for appendicitis. The quick action saved the life of the popular artisan.

Society

Word has just been received here anouncing the marriage of a former well-known Redwood City woman in Reno, Nevada., Miss Helen Curran. The groom is August Helbing, son of an old and prominent San Francisco family, and the wedding took place Friday, May 25. The couple are now on their way to New York for their honeymoon.

Mrs. Helbing is a daughter of the late James Curran, pioneer rancher of this section, and is a graduate of the Notre Dame Academy in this city. The family home was on Stambaugh street. Mrs. Helbing for the past several years had been residing with her sister, Mrs. George Stein, at 2515 Broadway in San Francisco.

The grom is the son of Mrs. D. A. Helbing of 2260 Jackson street and is a graduate of the University of California. He is in business in San Francisco.

Mrs. C. Sidney North entertained at two parties recently, honoring her sister, Miss Gean Mackay, who is soon leaving for her home in Hartlepool, England. Miss Mackay has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. North for nine months and has made a large number of friends who are loath to have her leave Redwood Last Friday the guests were served a delightful luncheon on the attractive porch of the North home—the table being set with a gay blue and orange table cover with a basket of harmonizing colors in the centre. Those present were Mrs. Donald Williams, Miss Maud Kenrick, Mrs. Ira Kahn, Miss Sophie Clayburgh, Mrs. H. Hinchman, Miss Gean Mackay and Mrs. Sidney Pamphilon and Mrs. Henry Lincoln of San Mateo and Mrs. George Perrett, Mrs. John Ainsley and Mrs. Gordon Ainsley of Campbell.

On Tuesday, the following ladies enjoyed Mrs. North's hospitality: Mrs. Harry Hallett, Mrs. Louis Genochio, Mrs. John Munday, Mrs. Wm. Dusel, Mrs. James Hedge, Mrs. Jules Lutge, Mrs. Philip Forsyth, Mrs. A. Steffins, Mrs. L. E. Bostwick, Miss Gean Mackay and Mrs. Vincent Morobito of San Francisco. In the bridge games Mrs. James Hedge and Mrs. John Munday captured the high scores and Mrs. Philip Forsyth was awarded the consolation.

MAYOR JAS. ROLPH POPULAR IN SOUTH

"Mayor James Rolph Jr. will carry Los Angeles county for the Republican nomination for Governor by a large majority. He is the popular choice of all classes and his campaign is gaining momentum every day."

Holmes (Harry) Serb, campaign director for Rolph for Governor, made the above assertion in San Francisco yesterday following his return from Los Angeles and San Diego, where he made a complete survey of the political situation.

"I was very much impressed by the unanimity of agreement among all factions interested in the Rolph campaign," said Sperb. "There is complete harmony, and the one thought of all is to elect Mayor Rolph Governor of California."

The southern California campaign is being organized by and will be directed by men and women in the southern part of the state, said Sperb. An indication of Rolph's popularity in the south can be gleaned from expressions of citizens in all walks of life, one of whom said to Sperb, "I am still looking for someone not for Rolph."

The Hayward Hotel, Rolph southern California headquarters, is a hub of activity, long lines of men and women—financiers, bankers, mechanics and labor leaders dropping in to pay their respects and volunteering to do whatever is possible to elect Rolph Governor.
